Anomaly Detection in Kibana 5.0. In September 2016, Elastic announced the acquisition of Prelert, now called Machine Learning, a behavioral analytics company. Prelert combines an anomaly detection engine, Elasticsearch for storing the analysis, and Kibana for visualizing the analysis. The anomaly detection engine brings unsupervised machine learning capabilities to the Elastic Stack so that Prelert is able to learn from the data as it ingests them, and can highlight events that deviate from ...

Kibana includes a free Data Visualizer to learn more about your data. In particular, if your data is stored in Elasticsearch and contains a time field, you can use the Data Visualizer to identify possible fields for anomaly detection: [experimental] This functionality is experimental and may be changed or removed completely in a future release.
