People love finding hidden symbols and secret codes in all sorts of objects — including art. It might be common knowledge that Da Vinci was an accomplished musician, but not many people know about the song he painted into “The Last Supper,” using rolls and hands in the place of music notes.

Famous art with hidden images - Insider
In Hidden Intellectualism by Gerald Graff, he begins with the argument of "street-smarts" versus "school-smarts". Graff explains that school-smarts can be hidden within street smarts and can be learnt through not just talking with friends, but also from the media and our surroundings, hence the "hidden" intellectualism.
